

NEW INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMME

ORGANIC FOOD SYSTEM

BACKGROUND

Dietary patterns are becoming more westernized worldwide. This has tremendous impact on food consumption, the environment, society and individual human health. The crucial role of the consumer in this development has been identified. Especially the socio-cultural context of food consumption and dietary patterns has been recognised as essential parts of a sustainable food system.

HOW DO WE MAKE FOODSYSTEMS MORE SUSTAINABLE?

The OFS programme will use the organic food system as a model to understand drivers of sustainable food consumption and to link this to real-world examples of sustainable production and consumption.

WHO WE ARE

We are a network of partners from institutions around the world engaged in the project work, committee or coordination of the organic food system programme. Partners contribute via our meetings, lead of or tasks within projects or with results and information from other projects.

CONTACT

The organic food system programme is a worldwide network of people working towards making our food systems, both local and global, more sustainable.
